money who cannot save comething out of their weekly or mearfuly wage. The habit may in some cases be hard to establishe, but once established it becomes like most other habits, hard to break essenti of. Some persons neglect to start the saving habit because they say the ameount they could spare would be so small it would not be worth while. Tet these who have the saving habit today in most cases began with very small amounts, even pennies, and the habit grew.

It children be encouraged to put pennies and nickets away and watch them grow, they soon learn to take pride in the amount of their savings. It is not necessary to insist that the children merely hoard the money. Indeed, they will generally appreciate the walks of the money are if they are allowed to spend it for what they want. The main thing is to impress upon them that if they plend their savings for one thing they must go without some though it have an almost purely selfish motive. The child will save in order to gain the greater enjoyment, and that is all the motive lots of folks peed.

There are so many ways nowadays to put money away at a proint that no one need feel that it is neckess to begin. Thrift stamps can alwaye be had, and they bear interest. The eavings banks will accept 81 deposits, and the interest is compounded semianneally on the halmers. Summer Months By WALT MASON.

By WALT MASON.

JULY'S a month that makes me sad, while on my errands trotting; the air is hot, the flier are bad, and I'm kept busy swatting. Though August fills our souls with grief, we yet may all remember a few short weeks will bring relief—the next month is September. But in July no kindly thought of that sent southes the spirit; for August will be twice as hot, and so we dread and fear it. And as we driad our bitter cup, and chase the bugs that bit us, we say to friends, "Cheer up! Cheer up! The worst is yet to hit us!" By day I plod with warry tread along the streets a-blaring, and elephess spend the night in bed, all kinds of thunder raising. And when I rise at six colock I feel like those poor critters who've lived for weeks on private stock, or home brewed brands of bitters. I droot and gibber as I slide to get a hrome selfner; in winter Hope walks by my side, but summer comes and melts her. The heat's so hot it cooks the trees and all the fruit is rotting, and I get on my hands and knees to do my daily swatting. It is no use to look shead to autumn's frost that durale; before they come we'll all be dead, and reasted to a frants.

WHEN THE BELLS RANG.
During a performance of Edgar Masgregar's new play. Self Defanse, at Asbury Park Tosetay night the fire bells rang. The curiain had just descended on the prologue. The sound of the bells caused it stage hands to gait the theater post haste and the play was delayed half as hour. The stage hands were all members of the volunteer fire department. It was a false alarm.
